Grizzly Growl '49

The Grizzly Growl Staff Plots and Plans . . .

In the top picture, editor-in-chief Grant Greenbank looks over the work of art editors Vernon Stanton, Betty Elmborg, and Barbara Sargent. Next, the three typists, Wanda Harris, Virginia Hudson, and Bonnie Joyce Riggs confer with the editorialist, Mary Jane Walton. In the following picture, business manager Wesley Poe exhibits a lay-out to copy reader Tom White, sports editor John Cousland, and photography editor Gregory Fisk. In the bottom picture, sports editor John Mannion and photography editors James Lovett, Carol Burton, and Jim Thompson concentrate, while business manager Carl Wallace bends over the group.

Throughout the year, the staff has tried to capture and to put into concrete form the elusive pirit of JUCO.

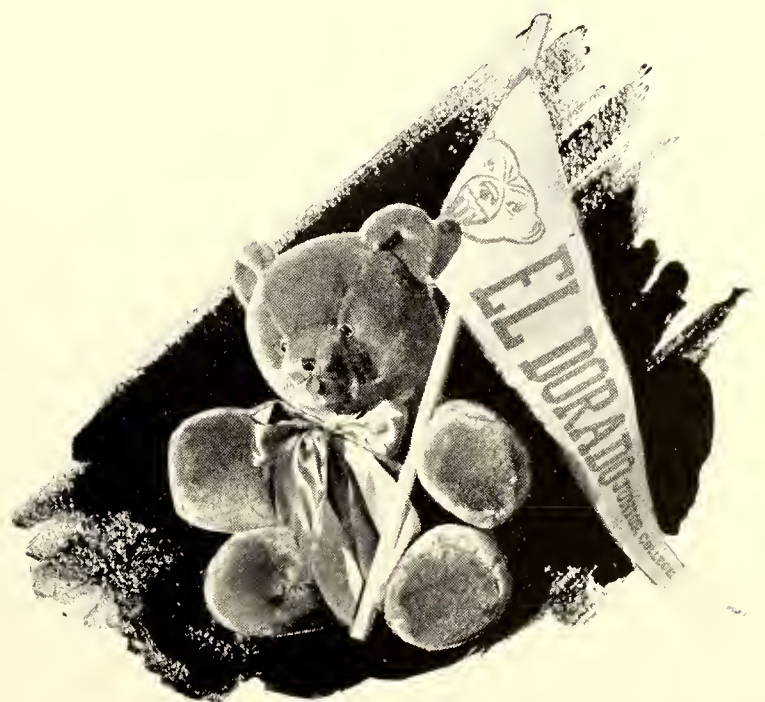

Dedication - - -

In a football pep assembly, cheerleaders Billie Jane Mong, Don Schlesinger, Carol Burton, Bob Biles, and Wanda Jean Harris leap high on the stage while leading the student body in one of the school yells. Members of the Pep Band stand in the background, conferring about their next selection.

What Is School Spirit?

School spirit is that indefinable quality which makes the difference between a genuine educational institution and a mere "larnin' factory." School spirit is more than cheering at school games, more than attending all of the school functions, more than working to make the honor roll, more than adopting a new mascot, even such a mascot as Gruffy T. Grizzly, whom the annual staff here proudly pictures. School spirit is all of these, plus that deep-rooted loyalty which springs only from the hearts of the students. It is to that spirit that the annual staff dedicates this book.

Administrators Oil the Machinery

The three figures pictured above need no formal introduction to JUCO-ites. Dean Bickford's sense of humor and understanding of human nature are as evident in the office or in the classroom as at football games or at school parties. JUCO students have learned that when they take their problems to the office, sympathetic discussion, if not positive solution, is forthcoming. Superintendent Hughes is more of a "behind the scenes" worker, who liberally applies the oil of wisdom and kindness to keep the administrative machinery in running order. Mrs. Lange's contagious vitality and limitless patience lend an inviting atmosphere of informality to "The Office."

Second row: S. H. Coffman, Chemistry; A. B. Collins, Biology; Robert G. Douglass, Athletics and Woodworking; Dorothy Fisher, Mathematics; W. M. Grove, Physics.

Teachers Are People Too

Contrary to popular misconceptions, the teachers pictured on these two pages do not lie awake nights conjuring up weird questions for the next day's tests. Rather, teachers are individuals who cheer loudly at football games, who like music, literature and the theater, and who are just as disappointed when they have to pen that ugly "P" or "F" on test papers as are the recipients.

The teachers join with the student body in praising JUCO's faithful friend and helper, Mr. J. A. Manion. Ever courteous, ever cooperative, ever efficient, Mr. Manion is JUCO's nomination for the ideal school custodian and general "Mr. Fixit." May he spend many more happy years at JUCO.

Could it be that these bright boys in Miss Fisher's algebra class are happy because they've just discovered "x"?

And could these cheerful lads in Mr. Coffman's chemistry laboratory be analyzing the contents of those coke bottles?

At this happy moment, the final production must be a long way off in Mr. Nixon's dramatic productions class.

Classes Are Varied

Miss Lafferty's sewing class, so intent upon various tasks, must be planning Easter outfits.

It's blue Monday in Miss Bradford's rhetoric class. What's the matter; did the themes just come back?

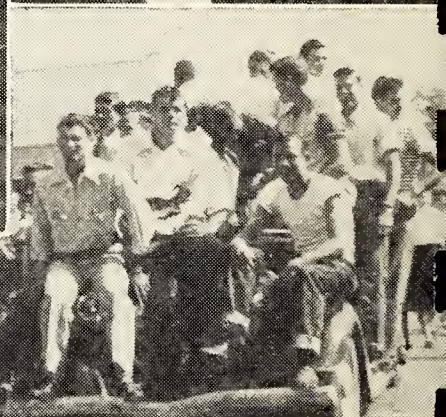

Mr. Christy might well be satisfied when his budding stenographers have mastered all these gadgets in office practice class.

ORGANIZATIONS

Student Government In Action

The JUCO steering committee, consisting of the Dean and the Student Council, has been generally successful in carrying out the objectives for the year—to decide matters of policy concerning the student body, to promote school spirit and to increase enthusiasm for worthwhile school activities, and to provide social functions for all members of the student body. First semester council president was Jim Thompson; when Jim left at the close of the semester, the students elected Dell Reed, first semester vice president, as president.

Presiding, Jim Thompson.

Although the group pictured above has the appearance of thoughtful tranquility, the Student Council has been far from inactive this year. Among other activities, the Council sponsored a get-acquainted party, an all-school dance, and a pep rally. In addition, the Council arranged for a bus to take the Band and the Pep Club to Iola, invited students of Butler County high schools to attend the homecoming game, helped manage the March-of-Dimes campaign, and combined a W. P. A. dance with a King-Queen contest for the benefit of the annual staff. Long-range projects were the election of cheerleaders for the year, the management of the concession stand at the football games, the inauguration of a flower fund, and the formation of definite plans for remodeling the Den. As this book goes to press, the Council plans for the future include Senior Day for high school students of the surrounding area.

Thus, through worthwhile activities, the Student Council continues to solidify the spirit of JUCO.

Variety in the Varsity Club

Things have been popping in the Varsity Club this year—the adoption of the Den, the nomination of a Wheatshocker Queen candidate, a dance at the Loc-Mor, and a Christmas gift for Coach Douglass, the sponsor. Plans for the future include initiation of new members, and perhaps a party, hayrack ride, or weiner roast.

Progress in the Pep Club

The Pep Club picked up some momentum this year—the members bought, dressed, and named JUCO's new mascot, Gruffy T. Grizzly; they sponsored school dances, including the Homecoming dance; crowned the queen at the Homecoming game, and worked in close cooperation with the cheerleaders (pictured here) for the general promotion of a good school spirit at the games.

Y. W. C. A. Entertains

The major activities of the year for the Y. W. C. A. have been the entertainment of the State Y. W. - Y. M. Conference in October, the presentation of the premier performance of Station K. O. R. N. in February, and the preparations for a tea in May for senior girls of the Butler County high schools.

Science Club Experiments

The Science Club held a number of day meetings, during which members discussed current scientific problems or lecturers presented such subjects as oil refining, astronomy, and photography. At night meetings, the club members carried out projects in photography, electroplating, telescope construction and in other similar fields.

The time: Monday at three p.m. The place: Room 103. The characters: The staff of the Grizzly Growls, one harrassed sponsor, and one battered typewriter.

The setting: Editor Max Shaffer and Miss Fisher, the sponsor, pore over the copy already on hand. Assistant editor Pat Manhand. waves a few sheets of paper—the write-up of last week's special assembly. "Do you think we have enough copy?" he asks. The editor shakes his head rather dubiously and then rushes to the typewriter to make a last entry in his "Time Out" column. In the meantime, Carol Burton and Wanda Harris have come in with their "Social and Poisonal" column, and Miss Fisher runs down to the office to check on last-minute items. The little group clustered around the table begins to go through the litter of papers. There's Bonnie Rigg's Fashion column, and Vernon Stanton's write-up of the basketball game; Mary and Jean Piper have come through with the student personality of the week, and Mary has taken care of the preparation of the "Theme of the Week." And there's Mary Walton's story of the faculty member of the week. Yes, all the regulars have come through, but will there be enough material? Paul Flint has done a story on Friday night's dance, and Betty Jo Pendergrass has one about a party given for the faculty members. But surely there ought to be more special articles than that. And there are —Tom Day rushes in to finish his story about next week's concert, and Will Rogers comes in with an extra little thing for the sports department. Maybe Joanne Markle, Tom White, or Richard Guinn, will come in later with something. Miss Fisher gets back, with a sheaf of notes, and the staff starts working madly to get the thing into shape. And then, in the final wind-up, the staff fills the four columns, and even has to cut out some of the material and save it for next week. (Any resemblance between this and an actual Monday in journalism club is purely intentional.)

Yes, the club is going strong this year. Members took their turns with the other organizations operating the concessions at the football games last fall, and sold the piano which used to be in Room 102, as a means of increasing the fund for that much-needed typewriter. They had a weiner roast and a general good time at Mr. Nixon's home one evening in October; and in January, celebrated the end of the semester with a dinner at the Steak House. Mr. Nixon has had to give up the sponsorship of the club because of his fuller teaching schedule, but Miss Fisher has taken over, and the group has been completely reorganized.

This year, as in the past, the Journalism club is striving to bring about better public relations between school and community, to inform the public of the school activities, and to give all the students an opportunity to participate in the program of the school. It is a sincere hope that the Grizzly Growls will continue to give voice and form to the Spirit of Juco.

PERSONALITY SPOTLIGHT

Grizzlies on the Gridiron

 Front row: Max Shaffer, Jim Lininger, Don McLaughlin, Jim Graham, Barney Morris (trainer), Jack Baker, Dick Ward, Bob Kennedy.
 Second row: Craig Lilley, Paul Bartholow, Ted Wertz, George Osterhout, Calvin Pence, Gray Ward, Wesley Poe, Dean Davis.
 Third row: Melvin Fritzler, Wimpy Alford, Clyde Hill, John Cousland, Dell Reed, Don Love, DeWayne Powell, Cleo Jenkins.
 Back row: Bob Pringle, Carl Parsons, Harold Bay, Tharon Bauman, Clyde Ewart, Clay Lumpkins, Bud Knowles, Allen Beard, Paul O'Neal.

A fighting Grizzly eleven roared onto the gridiron last fall to annex five victories out of nine starts, plus a tie for second in the western conference. The Grizzlies won from Iola, Parsons, Garden City, Pratt, and Ark City, and were pounded into submission by Emporia State B, Hutchinson, Chanute, and Dodge City.

Although there were only twenty-seven men out for the fall sport, they were a bunch of fighters who tossed defeat aside and into the faces of some good teams.

This year's Grizzly team averaged only 168 pounds, which was from five to twenty pounds less than the average weight of any team they played. But even with such a handicap in both weight and manpower, the Bears couldn't help winning, what with the running of "Hippity Hop" Graham and "Twinkle Toes" Shafer, along with the fighting heart of "Little" Pence and the line busting which was done by "General" Kennedy and by Don "Careless" Love, together with the kicking display by "P. P." Ewart and "Wheel" O'Neal.

Such a bevy of backs would have been in vain if it had not been for the interference that was led by Harold "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You" Bay, and a stone wall line as was displayed by Wimpy "Womp" Alford, Clay "Highest Scorer" Lumpkins, Paul "Zeke Bartholow, John "They Went Thataway" Baker, Dean "Cowboy" Davis, Bud "Get Out of My Way" Knowles, and Tharon "Therm" Bauman. Such a line had able substitutes in ends, such as Jim Lininger and Dell Reed; tackles like Dewey Powell, Clyde Hill and John Cousland; with guards like Craig Lilley, Ted Wertz, George Osterhout, Don McLaughlin and Carl Parsons; and high caliber centers like Merl Mitchel and Wesley Poe. But where would such a team be without a trainer—especially a trainer like Barney "Hand Me the Tape" Morris?

The students and faculty of El Dorado Juco have every reason to hold high their heads with pride for such a gallant and fighting team and for such a swell coach as head coach Robert Douglass and assistants Lee Casida and Dan Blaine.

All displayed the fine sort of school spirit which was the aim of Juco in 1948-1949.

CAROL BURTON was nominated by the Varsity Club and elected by the student body as El Dorado JUCO's candidate for the Wheat Shocker Queen at the Wheat Bowl game in Wichita, November 27. The student body was proud to have Carol as a representative at the festivities and ceremonies connected with the game.

LA DONNA PALMER was chosen by the football squad to be the Football Homecoming Queen. In an appropriate ceremony arranged by the Pep Club, she was crowned at the Homecoming Game by Team Captain Winfred Alford. At the dance after the game, Queen La Donna reigned with poise and dignity.

The El Dorado Junior College basketball quintet started the season in fine style by winning their first three games against Iola, Parsons, and Chanute respectively. It was in the fourth game that the hex was thrown on the "Grizzlies," when Fort Scott edged El Dorado in the closing seconds of the overtime game which was played at El Dorado. Then the locals traveled to Chanute to play in the eight team invitational tournament held at that city. El Dorado turned in a one-win two-loss record for the tournament, having lost to Chanute and Independence and winning over Iola in their final game.

Immediately following the tournament, the "Grizzlies" began their loop games in the traditionally tough Western Junior College Conference; and again the plague overtook the El Doradoans, for they dropped eleven consecutive games, nine of which were conference games. Then followed two consecutive wins over Central College of McPherson, both games being won by a wide margin. El Dorado finished the season by dropping their final conference game to Ark City. The final record showed El Dorado having six wins in twenty-one starts.

El Dorado began the season with an entirely new team, for there was but a single returning veteran from last year's team. Soon after the season commenced, the team suffered the loss of several players because of various causes. Although the "Grizzlies" did not enjoy a successful season in the conference, the students of Juco readily extend their sincere thanks to Coach Bob Douglass and his charges for their great amount of work and effort.

Even though the six wins for El Dorado were all non-conference, the "Grizzlies" showed power in whipping the Chanute team in an early season game, and also by turning in two wins over Central College of McPherson late in the season. The team played ten games on their home court and eleven games away and were forced to postpone only one game during the entire season.

Juco Stages Coronation

During the first week in April, the student council cooperated with the yearbook staff in managing a contest to elect a Yearbook Queen and a Yearbook King. The freshmen chose as candidates Betty Elmborg, Billie Mong, Verda Nye, Paul Bartholow, Edward Bradbury, and Jim Lininger. The sophomores nominated Lois Graf, Betty Jo Pendergrass, Barbara Sweeney, Ralph Austin, Calvin Pence, and Dell Reed. Votes were sold in the office for a penny a vote, and twenty-five votes were given with each ticket for the dance held Friday night, April 8.

At the dance, the members of the annual staff, in an appropriate ceremony featuring spotlights and music, crowned Betty Elmborg as Queen and Edward Bradbury as King.

The yearbook staff is proud to picture here the coronation ceremony. Long live Queen Betty—long live King Edward!

Grizzlies In Spring Sports

Since this book goes to press early in April, sports editors can do little more than list the schedule for meets and the entry list for events. At a triangular meet held at Hutchinson April 1, El Dorado placed third. The schedule follows, then the entry list, made up entirely of freshmen, except for Jim Graham:

April 1—Hutchinson Triangular
Arkansas City, Hutchinson and El Dorado.

April 14—Fort Scott Invitational.

April 19—El Dorado Triangular
St. John, Fort Scott, El Dorado.

April 23—Kansas University Re-

Tennis

To date, the 1949 tennis team, composed of Harry Gregerson, Bill Long, Pat Mannion, and Richard Gwinn, has lost three singles matches and one doubles match in an encounter with Arkansas City. As this article is written, the team is working hard and is planning to meet the Arkansas City team once more and to meet the Hutchinson team twice. The state tennis tournament will be held here in El Dorado in May, and it is hoped that the local team will turn in a creditable performance then.

Intramural Games Are Fun . . .

The team pictured at the top, captained by Ed Brower, won first place in the regular season play. The team at center, captained by Bob Neeley, won in the tournament play. Paul Bartholow was captain of the third-place team, at lower left, and Bob Mason was captain of the fourth-place team, shown at lower right.
